Help OSMA Capture Data About Problems With Insurance Companies

Do you feel like they're getting the run around by the insurers? Do you need a place to voice your complaints? The OSMA needs your stories. Please take a few minutes to complete the complaint form on Page 2 so the OSMA can gather data on unfair practices by health insurers. Your confidential responses will help the OSMA in its fight to level the playing field with the payers. All responses are confidential.

New AAP Reports Help Pediatricians Identify and Manage Autism Earlier

Two new clinical reports from the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) will help pediatricians recognize autism spectrum disorders (ASDs) earlier and guide families to effective interventions, which will ultimately improve the lives of children with ASDs and their families. The first clinical report, "Identification and Evaluation of Children With Autism Spectrum Disorders," (www.aap.org/pressroom/AutismID.pdf) provides detailed information on signs and symptoms so pediatricians can recognize and assess ASDs in their patients. Language delays usually prompt parents to raise concerns to their child's pediatrician – usually around 18 months of age. However, there are earlier subtle signs that if detected could lead to earlier diagnosis. An Autism checklist for parents can be found here: <http://www.utmem.edu/pediatrics/general/clinical/m-chat.pdf>.

The report advises pediatricians to be cognizant of signs of ASD, as well as other developmental concerns, at every well-child visit by simply asking the parents if they or their child's other caregivers have any concerns about their child's development or behavior. If concerns are present that may relate to ASD, the clinician is advised to use a standardized screening tool. The report also introduces universal screening, which means pediatricians conduct formal ASD screening on all children at 18 and 24 months regardless of whether there are any concerns.

Educational strategies and associated therapies, which are the cornerstones of treatment for ASDs, are reviewed in the second AAP clinical report, "Management of Children With Autism Spectrum Disorders." (<http://www.aap.org/pressroom/AutismMgmt.pdf>) Early intervention is crucial for effective treatment. The report strongly advises intervention as soon as an ASD diagnosis is seriously considered rather than deferring until a definitive diagnosis is made. The child should be actively engaged in intensive intervention at least 25 hours per week, 12 months per year with a low student-to-teacher ratio allowing for sufficient one-on-one time. Parents should also be included.
